Lesson 1: NEWSPAPER

1. Piense y responda en castellano.

a. ¿Qué periódicos circulan en su localidad?

b. ¿Cuál es su periódico preferido? ¿Por qué?

Lea atentamente el siguiente texto.

Newspapers are publications containing news, information and advertising. It may be general or special interest, most of them published daily or weekly.

The first printed newspaper was published in 1605, and the form has grown even in the face of competition from technologies such as radio, television, and the internet. Recent developments on the internet are, however, offering major challenges to the business model of many newspapers, although historically, new media technologies such as radio and television never replaced print media.

General-interest newspapers are usually journals of current news. Those can include political events, crime, business, culture, sports, and opinions (in the form of editorial, columns, or political cartoons). Newspapers use photographs to illustrate stories; they use editorial cartoonists. They usually illustrate opinion, more than news.

Some specific features a newspaper may include are:

- Weather news and forecasts
- An advice column
- Critical reviews of movies, plays, restaurants, etc.
- Editorial opinions
- A gossip column

over pls →

- Comic strips and other entertainment, such as crosswords, sudoku and horoscopes
- A sports column or section
- A humor column or section
- A food column
- Classified ads are commonly seen in local or small newspapers

Types of newspaper

A daily newspaper is issued every day, often with the exception of Sundays and some national holidays. Saturday, and where they exist Sunday, editions of daily newspapers tend to be larger, include more specialized sections and advertising inserts, and cost more. Typically, the majority of these newspapers' staff works Monday to Friday, so the Sunday and Monday editions largely depend on content done in advance.

Weekly newspapers are also common and tend to be smaller than daily papers.

CHILE: MEMORIAL TO VICTIMS OF FEMICIDE KICKS OFF AWARENESS CAMPAIGN

Citizen Group Says 37 Women Have Been Victims Of Femicide In First Half Of 2007

(July 27, 2007) The Network Against Domestic and Sexual Violence in Chile initiated its campaign "¡CUIDADO! EL MACHISMO MATA" — Careful! Machismo Kills! — Thursday with solemn memorial services dedicated to victims of femicide. The organization used empty pairs of shoes to represent the more than 300 women who have been murdered because of their gender since 2001.

This is an excerpt taken from a newspaper which is published in Santiago. It is written in English. It is The Santiago Times.

The World Wide Web is a collection of electronic documents that are linked together like a spider web.

These documents are stored on computers called servers located around the world.

The Web has evolved into a global electronic publishing medium and increasingly, a medium for conducting electronic commerce.

The Web consists of:

- Your personal computer
- Web browser to access the Web
- A connection to an Internet service
- Servers to host the data
- Routers and switches to direct the flow of data

How the Web Works

Web pages are stored on web servers located around the globe.

Entering the (Uniform Resource Locator) URL of a web page in your web browser or clicking a link sends a request to the server which hosts the page.

The server sends the web page to your computer and your web browser displays it on your screen.

A web page is an electronic document written in a computer language called HTML (Hypertext Markup Language).

Web pages can contain text, graphics, video, animation, and sound, as well as interactive features, such as data entry forms.

Each page has a unique address known as a URL (Uniform Resource Locator), which identifies its location on the server.

Web pages usually contain hyperlinks to other web pages. Hyperlinks are text and images that reference the URLs of other web pages.

Websites

A website is one or more web pages that relate to a common theme, such as a person, business, organization, or a subject, such as sports.

The first page is called the home page, which acts like an index, indicating the content on the site.

From the home page, you can click hyperlinks to access other web pages.

Ponga atención a los títulos y palabras en negrita.
Le ayudarán a entender mejor.

Describa la "homepage" y los "hyperlinks" que contiene.

Lesson 3: PEOPLE WITH DISABILITIES AND TECHNOLOGY

"Caminar por las calles de Santiago es casi un acto reflejo, le hacemos el quite a los hoyos de las aceras y sólo vamos preocupados de que no nos vayan a meter la mano a la cartera. Pero, ¿se ha puesto a pensar que pasaría si tuviese que usar una silla de ruedas para moverse? ¿Cuánto tiempo le tomaría entrar a un edificio o subirse a una micro?"

Revista Atrévete (Fonadis)

1. Piense y responda en castellano.

a. ¿Conoce usted a alguna persona discapacitada?

b. ¿Qué tipo de discapacidades existen?

c. Piense por un momento qué tipo de impedimentos encuentra una persona discapacitada en la vida diaria.

Lea atentamente el siguiente texto.

People with disabilities meet barriers of all types. However, technology is helping to lower many of these barriers. By using computing technology for tasks such as reading and writing documents, communicating with others, and searching for information on the Internet, students and employees with disabilities are capable of handling a wide range of activities independently. Still, people with disabilities face a variety of barriers to computer use. These barriers can be grouped into three functional categories: barriers to providing computer input, interpreting output, and reading supporting documentation. Hardware and software tools have been developed to provide functional alternatives to these standard operations. Specific products, and approaches to using them are described below.

Mobility Impairments

Some wheelchairs may not fit under standard height computer tables and some computer users do not have enough use of their hands and arms to operate a standard keyboard or mouse.

Equipment which provides flexibility in the positioning of monitors, keyboards, documentation, and tabletops is useful for many individuals with disabilities. Plugging all computer components into power outlet strips with accessible on/off switches makes it possible for some individuals to turn equipment on and off independently.

Blindness

Individuals who are blind cannot access visual material presented on the computer screen or in printed materials.

Most individuals who are blind use standard keyboards, however, Braille input devices are available. Braille key labels can assist with keyboard use.

Speech output systems can be used to read screen text to computer users who are blind. Special software programs, called screen readers "read" computer screens and speech synthesizers "speak" the text. The availability of earphones for individuals using speech output systems can reduce the distractions for others nearby.

Hearing and/or Speech Impairments

Speech and hearing disorders alone do not generally interfere with computer use. However, modern speech synthesizers can substitute voices and thus provide a compensatory tool for students who cannot communicate verbally. Students with portable systems can participate in class discussions once adapted computers provide them with intelligible speaking voices. Word processing and educational software may also help students who are hearing impaired develop writing skills.

Specific Learning Disabilities

Educational software where the computer provides multi-sensory experiences, interaction, positive reinforcement, individualized instruction, and repetition can be useful in skill building. Some students with learning disabilities who have difficulty processing written information can also benefit from completing writing assignments, tutorial lessons, and drill-and-practice work with the aid of computers. For example, a standard word processor can be a valuable tool for individuals with dysgraphia, an inability to produce handwriting reliability.
